THE BATTLE OF THE BOYNE That is to be Fought Over Again

To-day at Montreal. On July 12, 1690, two kings fought : battle on the Tiver Böyne in Ireland. Neither of them was an Irishman. One was from Holland, William the Stadtholder. The other was an Englishman, James II., The other was an Engishman, same I, who had a small French army. Both these men hated the Irish. They were rivals for the English throne. James was S Catholic, William was a Protestant. The descendants of the English colonists who had became Irish Protestants, became fanatics in support of William. The Irish Catholies became fanatics in support of James. In the battle of the Boyne, James was defeated and fied, leav-ing his Irish friends to the mercy of William, who speedily destroyed Irish trade, broke the treaty of Limerick, and laid the foundations of the Penal code—a code which Dr. Johnson declared more code which Dr. Johnson declared more atrocious in its effects than the ten Pagan persecutions of the Christians; which Lecky, the Protestant historian of ra-tionalism, says it is impossible for any Irish Protestant to look back upon withshame and indignation, unless his Irish Protestant to look back upon without shame and indignation, onless his mind be wholly perverted by religious bigotry, and which, in its bloody details, ramaina a ghastly, monument of the cruelty of fareer religion.

The iteraty of Limerick would have constituted a bond of tolerable union between the English Protestant King and his Irish Catholic subjects. In exchange for the surrender of the citadel and the city, the Catholic Irish were guaranteed a modicum of tiberty—the rights they had under Charles II. That sovereign denied them the right to be members of corporations; they were accluded from many civil officer, but Catholic peers and commoners could sit in parliament, the bar was open to them, they could buy and commoners could sit in parliament, the bar was open to them, they could buy and relil land and own other property. The treaty of Limerick, signed in 1991, guaranteed the rights which James' elder brother had not chosen to take away. Just two months after the treaty was agreed, it was abroken by King William and the English parliament. They excluded sil Catholics from parliament; from all offices, civil, military, and ecclesiantic, from the professions of law and medicine. On the effect of these laws, Lecky, who has no Catholic prejudices, says: "The productive energies of the untion were alially diminished. Almost all Catholics of energy and taient who reluced to abandon ther faith, emigrated to foreign lands. The relation of classes was permanently viltated; for almost all the proprietary of the country belonged to one religion, while the great majority of the country belonged to one religion, while the great majority of the country belonged to one religion and consuged by the legislative, a considerable of the Burston of the surface of the surface of the surface of the surface of the country belonged to one religion while the great majority of the country belonged to one religion, while the great majority of the country described to the surface of the surface of the surface of the surface of the of the Boyne. It is this victory which the Orangemen of Montreal propose to celebrate on July 12. And since shey do insiston celebrating it, why should they be interfered with?

Every man has the civil right to make a fool of himrelf, so long as his folly does not interfere with the civil rights of other men. Every man has the right to be a higot or a fanatic, or to parade the streets tattooed or trapped out like a Sioux savage, provided his conduct does not violate law and provided it is not morally certain to drive other fools or higots or fanatics or Sioux savages into heraking the law. Why, the Catholics of Montreal should care whether the Orange such paradle or not, is incomprehensible in Chicago, I there are siny Urangemen in Chicago, whose indifference to the thermometer will canable them to parade on the 12th; they will certainly not be interfered with. The people of Montreal whorde not synapathize with the feelings which inspire the Orange parade, ought to have as much common sense as the heterogeneous population of a free and tolerant wastern American city, whose denises laugh just an willingly at one kind of Veircus' as at another, and who could not possibly be persuaded to "stir up the animals" with stick or stone. This common-sense sort of toleration it seems cannot be accilmated in Canada. Canadian higotry, like Canada thistiets, is a rank weed. The prospects of a street battle in Montreal on Fridays are very good; unless the Orangemen change their announced determination to parade.

Never before, we believe, has there been such a number of persons recking county offices. But two offices with large salaries in this county are to be filled at the coming, election—that of Probate Judge and Sheriff—and yet there is, we believe, in each party, not less than a score of candidates for the office of Sheriff, and half as many in each party wish to be judges of the Probate Court. The Sheriff s—the one most sought after in this county—ought to be filled by a competent business man. A proper discharge of the duties of this important office requires that the officer should be a man of more than ordinary intelligence, with at least a good English education and good executive ability. Blat-in this county there seems to be an impression abroad that no such qualifications are needed; that any man who can write his riends by the belief that, he can employ a man for his deputy for $50 a month who will be much better qualified than the chief; and such is the fact. The men now offering for this office are much like those that come to the front every two years. A few of them might perform the plainest duties of the office

West ALEXANDER, July 11.
On the 10th a young man named Burrows was accidentally shot by a comrade mamed Ryam. There were three of them out hunting on the Ryan farm, near Point Mills, and having treed some game in a hollow tree, one of them climbed the tree and scared a squirrel out, which fell to the ground. Burrows and Byan undertook to capture the same; the gun of the latter went off and the contents entered the body of Burrows, who died yesterday morning. He will be buried to-day.
